Statement of National Goals for the National Press

Germany has decided to join the current NATO Summit at a crucial time for Europe and the international community. The conflict in Kosovo puts us face to face with the urgent need of political clarity and moral responsibility as well as strong cooperation between allies.

Germany has a clear purpose in this Summit, contributing to a unified NATO's response to the humanitarian crisis in Kosovo, we are faced with civilian displacement, violation of human right and the destabilization of Southeast Europe. We are committed to the protection of human dignity. Military action is never a goal in itself and the Federal Government has approached every step taken within NATO with caution and restraint. However when diplomatic efforts are rejected and peaceful solutions are continuously undermined, the international community must not remain passive in the face of mass suffering.

We expect firm commitment to alliance unity. Our objective shall remain clear, the withdrawal of Serbian security forces from Kosovo and the safe return of refugees as well as the establishment of an international presence that guarantees peace and stability.

Lastly I wish to emphasize that Germany does not act out of national interest alone. Our actions are guided by the responsibility as being a part of the Atlantic Alliance as well as our status as a democratic state.

The decisions taken at this Summit do not concern only the Kosovo crisis but also Europe's credibility in a time of need. Germany stands ready to take its share of responsibility in this decisive moment.

Gerhard Schröder,
Federal Chancellor of the Federal Republic of Germany
